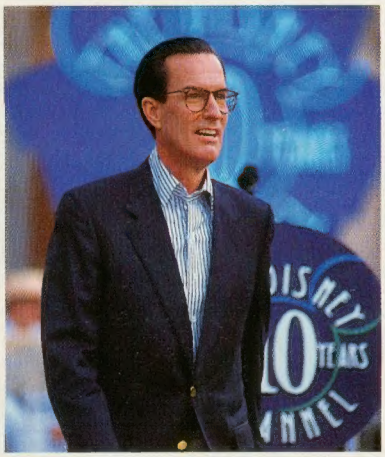
A LETTER TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS



John F. Cooke at The Disney Channel's Tenth Anniversary Celebration in Los Angeles.

Since her debut in 1991, Trisha Yearwood has become country music's fastest rising star. Her two albums—Trisha Yearwood and Hearts in Armor—were certified platinum, each selling over a million copies. She's been hailed by music observers and critics as a superbly gifted singer.

So it comes as no surprise that we at The Disney Channel are proud to present the world premiere of our latest music special, Trisha Yearwood: The Song Remembers When. Not only will Ms. Yearwood be performing such hits as "She's in Love with the Boy" and "Hearts in Armor," but she'll also be performing songs from her forthcoming third album.

As The Disney Channel celebrates its 10th anniversary, we're especially proud of our tradition of presenting the finest in contemporary musical specials. Some of our previous shows have starred Fleetwood Mac, Tina Turner, Harry Connick Jr., Paul McCartney, Paula Abdul, James Taylor, Gloria Estefan, Judy Collins, and Ringo Starr. In the months ahead, The Disney Channel will be premiering, on our Sunday Night Showcase, specials featuring Tom Petty and Celine Dion.

These programs are part of Disney Night Time—television for the adults in the family. After 9:00 p.m. (Eastern/Pacfic Time), Disney Night Time offers films, specials, and miniseries. On Monday, The Best of Hollywood features classic movies; on Tuesday, The American Legacy celebrates the American spirit with programs exploring our history, culture, and people. And Sunday Night Showcase offers the finest in contemporary music and comedy specials, as well as documentaries.

In fact, in October and November, Sunday Night Showcase will present, in addition to Trisha Yearwood, the world premieres of Bing! His Legendary Years, the most complete musical history ever assembled on Bing Crosby; The Unknown Marx Brothers, a look at rarities from the careers of the madcap trio; and David Bowie: Black Tie White Noise. You'll also not want to miss The American Legacy, which offers The Legend of Billy the Kid. It's a look at the man and the myth, including film clips that illustrate Hollywood's ever-changing take on "The Kid."

Those are just a few of the highlights on Disney Night Time in October and November. It's part of our continuing commitment to provide quality entertainment for the entire family. So take a peek at Disney Night Time. You'll discover that the magic of The Disney Channel isn't just for kids.

A Saturday In The Life Of Our Pontiac Trans Sport

8:07 a.m. Anti-lock brakes save day for ducks.

Our weekend doughnut run was an adventure, thanks to some wayward ducks. Fortunately, our Trans Sport has standard anti-lock brakes, so we stopped easily without ruffling any feathers.

11:01 a.m. Flexible seating helps get soccer stars and gear to game.

The available modular seating in our Trans Sport really came in handy. We just arranged the seats for five people, then folded and stowed the back seats for even more room.

PONTIAC CARES with a 3-year/36,000-mile no-deductible bumper-to-bumper limited warranty (see your dealer for details), plus free Transportation. Call 1-800-762-4900 for more product information and dealer locations. GM. © 1993 GM Corp. All rights reserved.

2:28 p.m. New power sliding door helps weekend warrior.

Even with our arms full, Trans Sport helped ease the load. We just pressed a button on the key fob, and the side door opened automatically.

4:35 p.m. Safety features allow peace of mind.

When we chose the modular seats, we also opted for the built-in child seats. And Trans Sport has a standard airbag, too. So a quick trip to the store was safe and easy.

6:52 p.m. New styling stops traffic and turns heads downtown.

We like to think of ourselves as practical, but we just love the power of our available 3.8 liter V6 engine. And when another couple stopped to admire our Trans Sport,® well, that was just icing on the cake.

ANOTHER DOGGONE CLASSIC FROM WILLIAM WEGMAN

"I'm becoming addicted to making books," laughs artist William Wegman. As you may remember from our April/May issue, the internationally renowned artist produced a postmodern fairy tale, Cinderella, which was illustrated with elegant and witty photographs of his pet Weimaraners. The book proved an instant classic, and Wegman's photos are on exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art. Now Wegman strikes again with Little Red Riding Hood, which appears in October.

In Little Red Riding Hood, Fay Wray plays the grandmother, Battina is Red Riding Hood, and Chundo has dual roles as the woodsman and the wolf. Little Red Riding Hood, the artist says, is "more my type of story" than Cinderella. "I can imagine doing those things, like walking through the woods." Cinderella, on the other hand, was "like a picnic with people you don't know. All that about getting dressed up and going to the ball—I didn't go to my high school prom." Perhaps, but Wegman proved a sure hand at creating the story. And that shot of Cinderella's coach pulled by Weimaraner puppies? "A nightmare," he laughs. "My knees get weak just thinking about it!"

The special also profiles coach Ron Wilson, and how he melded 24 players from different teams into a working unit. It's all in time for The Mighty Ducks' season opener against the Detroit Red Wings at The Pond in Anaheim on Oct. 8.

THE HONEYMOONERS: AN AMERICAN ORIGINAL

© MICHAEL OCHS ARCHIVES/Venice, CA

Coming up in 1994, Sunday Night Showcase will present a classic from the golden age of television: The Honeymooners' Really Lost Debut Episodes, starring Jackie Gleason and Art Carney.

But wait! No doubt you've heard of other networks airing rare "lost episodes" of The Honeymooners. Ah, but here's the difference: Those "lost episodes" were from Gleason's series The Honeymooners. What we're proud to present on The Disney Channel, unseen in over four decades, are the comedic skits from Gleason's variety show The Cavalcade of Stars—including the very first sketch that introduced Ralph Kramden and the other Honeymooner characters. So if you're familiar with classic '50s television—or just a fan of brilliant comedy—The Honeymooners' Really Lost Debut Episodes promise to be a spring treat.

Survival Skills

SAVVY SHOPPERS

In today's challenging economy, one group still has a relatively large amount of money to spend: children.

Yet kids may not be getting much training in the art and science of shopping.

According to Mary Ellen Rider McRee, assistant professor in family resource management at Purdue University, Indiana, children aged four to 12 have typically done better economically than have their parents. "They get allowances, they get cash gifts, and they're working—around the house—so they have cash," McRee says. And the amount of money children have to spend has risen considerably over the last few decades, researchers have discovered.

McRee says children will benefit from being taught the basics of shopping: how to investigate what products are available, how to price-shop, how to figure sales tax, and, perhaps most importantly, how to make sound choices.

From about age four, children have spending money, McRee notes. "Age four is not too young for kids to learn about money, because the children are already watching their parents shop." Of course, many children see their parents' use of plastic cards and checks as something other than spending money—they need to have the systems of credit and check-writing explained to them in simple terms. For concrete shopping experience, young children can perform mock transactions before they go into a store to make a purchase.

Parents can also talk to kids about why they might want to buy a particular item; how long they expect it to last; how often they think they will use it or play with it; and whether they think it is priced right.

"Advertisements can be used as learning tools, too," McRee suggests. "Talk to a child about what an ad really says." For example, parents can discuss how big a desired toy is in real life—as opposed to how it looks in an advertisement.

Children can also learn to read the small print in advertisements. Ad qualifiers such as "good while supplies last" can be explained, which may help allay disappointment if the family arrives at the store too late to make the purchase.

Kids also need experience in handling real money, and children from the first grade on can usually benefit from the experience of making change. (McRee adds that today she finds an increasing number of store clerks who have trouble computing change.) Moreover, most of the work children do in school with money involves paper and pencil exercises—and the feel and weight of real money can be confusing to kids at first.

As a learning lab, McRee loves the grocery store. She suggests parents turn a routine trip to the market into an educational lesson in choice by giving their children a certain dollar amount—even 25 cents—to spend. By having discretionary cash at hand, children can experience the success and failure that comes from making various purchases.

As kids get older, they can learn to read the product and shelf labels at the market, helping the family make better purchases by comparing the cost-per-unit differences among brands. Parents can also explain why there are often savings to be realized in buying products in large quantities. And children can be taught to read packages for certain features that are important to the family, such as "Is this detergent biodegradable?" or "Is there more sugar in this cereal than that one?"

McRee encourages parents to coach their children into becoming assertive buyers as well as prudent ones. When a child comes to the toy department clutching his or her own cash, McRee urges parents to encourage a direct child-clerk interaction. If children do a good job with the process of buying, praise them, she advises, and if they run into trouble, talk it through later and play out ways they could handle the experience differently.

Good For You

FIGHTING FAMILY FLU

It's bad enough having a child sick with the flu. But when the whole family is sick—especially the caregiving parents—fighting the flu can feel like a primal struggle for survival.

That's one of the reasons experts recommend a strong, directed approach toward prevention. Today's advice goes beyond the old general "get plenty of rest and exercise" warnings most people learned in high school health class. Today, health practitioners are recommending that parents get flu shots.

According to Dr. G. Scott Giebink, a professor of pediatrics at the University of Minnesota, parents typically get the flu from their children. Spread by airborne droplet, the viral infection is highly contagious. What usually happens is that one child brings the infection into the house, and just as he or she starts to get better, the rest of the family begins to get the flu, domino-style.

A reliable approach to preventing family flu is to immunize the parents, Giebink says. Protecting the two people with whom most young flu victims come into contact helps prevent the spread of the infection throughout the family.

A significant number of children should also get flu shots, including those with ailments such as asthma or congenital heart disease. Giebink says that parents should ask their children's health providers a simple question: "If my child gets influenza, would he have more difficulty with the illness than would a normal child?" If the answer is yes, opt for the flu shot.

"The immunization is attenuated [killed] vaccine, which is exceedingly safe," says Giebink. Production of the vaccine involves the use of eggs, however, so if a child or an adult has had a serious allergic reaction to eggs or egg products, his skin should be tested. If he tests hypersensitive, he should not be given the vaccine.

Influenza starts to strike in the fall, and usually continues through mid-spring. Every year there are two to three expected flu strains circulating, and these are the viruses for which the flu shot is specifically targeted. Young children get two injections, one month apart, and older children and adults receive just one.

"It is wise to get the flu shot as soon as it becomes available," Giebink says. "Don't worry about getting it too soon in the season: the protection will last at least through spring." Yet procrastinators shouldn't feel they're too late: it's better to get the flu shot in January than not at all.

Together

URBAN SAFARIS

The city: they say it's a jungle out there.

But cities can be exciting, fascinating places to learn about all sorts of things. So says Carolyn Shaffer, coauthor with Erica Fiedler of City Safaris, who urges families to take urban expeditions.

"Cities are very complex systems, full of surprises and riches, full of cycles and flows," Shaffer says.

Imagine, then, a big city as a type of exotic forest, full of unusual sounds and places to explore. Just as naturalists study forests by looking at three distinct layers—the ground level, the understory, and the canopy—Shaffer suggests that families walk the concrete trail noticing what's to be found at their feet, at eye level, and at levels above them.

Some parents might prefer to start off by taking a tour offered by a local historical society, or by checking with the Chamber of Commerce or tourism office to find out which areas are most interesting to explore—and which areas are safe. Other families, says Shaffer, might like to board a bus into the city and get off wherever they see a micro-community that looks intriguing. For many suburban or rural children, such a trip could be their first foray into super-urban life.

FAMILIES

safari? Shaffer recommends a wide range of approaches that can be adapted to fit a family's personal style and interests.

Some families like to do a little homework before going. One interesting approach Shaffer recommends is putting together a treasure hunt of things to find on the trip—not just objects but also sounds, emotions, colors, smells. For example, she suggests families look for such particulars as something humorous, something precious, something that can't be photographed (like laughter or a song), a relic of the past, a sign of the times, a boundary. At the end of the day, everyone compares notes and discusses what they saw.

Others might like to take a survey approach, counting the number of things they spot, such as gardens, street lights, broken windows, or bumper stickers. And of course, there are established sights to see, too—zoos, museums, and the like.

Sometimes shopping districts are fun for children. Interviewing neighborhood shopkeepers, looking at products in multi-cultural stores, listening to different languages and accents—"all provide rich experiences," Shaffer says.

If children bring a piece of paper and a crayon on their visit, they can make a rubbing of a manhole cover or a rough spot of sidewalk—or sketch the city's skyline.

Whatever families undertake, Shaffer says, "city safaris are about discovering some of the mystery in the city—and about taking some of the mystery out of it.

"Walking through a city with no other purpose but to experience it is a lesson in itself. The city looks different when you think of it as a place of treasures rather than as a place to be afraid of."

Some families will find the industrial districts of a city fascinating. Visiting flower and produce marts at dawn—when most open—can be quite an adventure and can expose the kids to a part of city life they might never have imagined.

DREAM KEEPERS

Clinton Hill was a fifth-grader in New Hope, Minnesota, when he started an environmental club for his fellow students. He was committed to getting kids involved with environmental issues.

That was in 1989. Months later, Clinton died of a brain tumor. But in his memory, his parents established "Kids For Saving Earth" (KSE), now an independent, non-profit organization.

With the help of an adult advisor, children can start up a KSE chapter. Members receive a colorful, fact-filled newsletter. Individual membership costs $7 and includes a membership card and certificate, quarterly mailings of the KSE News, educational materials, and a guide book. Write KSE, P.O. HAVE BABY, WILL TRAVEL

The big, beautiful—and heavy—perambulator is history. Baby carriages of the past may have met the needs of their time, but today's strollers are lightweight and manageable—whether jogging, shopping, or flying cross-country. Strollers are a growing market: retail sales have increased from $850 million in 1980 to $3.2 billion in 1991, according to the Juvenile Products Manufacturers Association.

SOUP KITS
Two of the handy soup kits now available in markets and gourmet shops, and from mail-order firms.

SOUP'S ON

As the leaves change color and the nights grow colder, a cook's thoughts turn to soup.

Soup is not only a hearty, hit-the-spot complete meal—especially when served with a salad and bread—but making soup is a fun family activity.

Making soup the old-fashioned way—slowly—can be fascinating for children. Kids will love to cut up pumpkin, peel garlic, measure liquids, and pinch spices into the simmering pot. The aroma of slow-cooking meals on the stove is sure to become a childhood memory—and revive parents' memories, too.

For those families with less time in preparing but just as much interest in enjoying a fresh soup, there are now soup kits. Available in grocery stores and gourmet shops, and from mail-order firms, soup kits include all the dry ingredients and spices, with instructions on what to add.

Diana Ferguson, owner of Just Delicious Gourmet Foods in Fullerton, California, says soups from kits are perfect for all-day slow-cooking in a crock pot. She says that young children are attracted to the different colors and shapes of the ingredients, and the kits are so simple, children can easily help out. Kits come in a wide range of varieties, from autumn harvest (with brown lentil beans and orange carrots) to minestrone, split pea, red lentil, and black bean chili soup.

Homemade Goodness

PUMPKIN SOUP

*3 pounds pumpkin, cooked
2 tbsp butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped carrots
1 cup chicken broth
1/2 tsp salt
1/8 tsp black pepper
1/4 tsp ground nutmeg
1 pint half and half
1 cup whole berry cranberry sauce or pomegranate seeds

1. Remove cooked pumpkin from pumpkin shell. Measure 4 cups pulp, and blend in food processor fitted with metal blade until pureed. Set aside.
2. In large saucepan, melt butter or margarine. Saute onion and carrots 5 minutes or until tender but not browned.
3. Stir in broth, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Bring to a boil.
4. Boil, covered, for 5 minutes. Reduce heat to simmer.
5. Stir in squash puree and half and half. Simmer 5 minutes or until heated through. Serve in soup bowls with 2 tablespoons cranberry sauce or a sprinkling of pomegranate seeds on each serving. Serves 8.

* To Cook Fresh Pumpkin:

1. Remove seeds from the pumpkin and cut it into four or eight large chunks, with skin attached.
2. Put 1/2 inch of water in the bottom of a roasting pan. Put pumpkin sections, skin side down, on a roasting rack in the pan. Cover with foil.
3. Bake in 350 degree oven for about an hour, until the pumpkin meat is tender.

To serve this soup in a pumpkin—a nice decorative touch: Use a hollowed-out fresh, hard, sugar pumpkin which has been warmed 20 minutes in a 350 degree oven.

TALKING TURKEY
While turkeys were on the menu at that first Thanksgiving in 1621, they weren't the focus of the meal as they are today. The first Thanksgiving was a pot-luck party, and the main dishes included fish, venison, duck—and turkey.
Over 200 years passed before the idea of an annual Thanksgiving celebration took hold. Abraham Lincoln issued a proclamation making the last Thursday of November, 1863, a day of prayerful thanksgiving.
According to the National Turkey Federation, more than 45 million turkeys will be purchased for this Thanksgiving. Beyond the holiday, turkey is increasingly popular—per capita consumption of the bird has increased 221% since 1973.

RAFFI & THE POWER OF MUSIC

The acclaimed balladeer for the young returns to The Disney Channel in a world premiere concert that highlights Raffi's new themes and concerns

By David Callaway

"Baby Beluga," "Willoughby Wallaby Woo," "Down by the Bay," "Peanut Butter Sandwich"—they are Raffi's classics, songs instantly recognizable to millions of preschoolers of the last decade, not to mention their parents. Kids—and parents—have sung along to the lyrics, clapped their hands, laughed, and contorted their mouths to make the hoots or trumpet sounds their idol requests in his songs.

"People feel I'm a friend of the family they can trust," says Raffi, a man of 45 with a slightly graying beard and gentle eyes. "There's a personal relationship there, and I feel very honored." Yet the implications of his success awe him: Mothers have told Raffi that their five-year-olds won't go to bed without watching one of his videos. "That's an enormous place to hold in a child's life."

For some years, Raffi retired from performing for children, but now he's back. His new concert Raffi on Broadway is a world premiere on The Disney Channel on October 6. This musical special is full of fun ▷

"These are troubled times we live in.... Teaching responsibility from a young age is the best education we can give..."

and play, and it includes some old favorites among Raffi's songs, as well as new songs that reflect more clearly themes Raffi feels are of great importance today: peace and the global family, the connectedness of all things and creatures, and the need to save our environment. During the concert, Raffi is joined onstage for several numbers by a choir of Kids For Saving Earth, a group he enthusiastically champions.

Raffi believes strongly that the power of his music should be put to good use in making children more aware. "These are troubled times we live in," he explains. "The problems are such that there is a crisis on this planet. Teaching responsibility from a young age is the best education we can give..."

Born in Cairo, Egypt, in 1948 to Armenian parents, Raffi Cavoukian was 10 when his family moved to Toronto, Canada. He grins when asked how a new language and a new country might have affected an immigrant boy. "Oh," Raffi says, "I just wanted to get along." His early musical influences included his father, who plays the accordion—"a wonderful instrument," Raffi exclaims. It's an instrument which Raffi plays and is glad to have accompanying some of his new music. Toronto's local Armenian church choir might be said to have been Raffi's performing debut; the idea of singing as a career came later.

That was in the '60s. Young Raffi, in tune with his generation, started strumming his guitar in coffee houses as a folkie in the Woody Guthrie/Bob Dylan tradition. He also found himself performing in nursery schools and kindergartens. In 1976, Raffi recorded the album that launched his career: Singable Songs for the Very Young.

Having proved himself in those classroom performances, Raffi says, was one of the keys to his success. Literally from the ground level, he learned how kids respond and how to hold their attention. Raffi also learned a not-so-simple secret: treating children with profound respect. His songs meanwhile derived from old camp refrains, collaborations with friends, word play, and Raffi's feelings for nature and, of course, peanut butter.

The figures speak of his achievement: nine albums for children, sales in excess of six million, two videos, four song books, and eight picture books based on his music. In 1983, Raffi received the Order of Canada, that nation's highest civilian award. But by 1988, Raffi was in need of a new direction, and he announced his retirement from children's music.

Raffi's subsequent immersion in environmental study resulted in an "ecology" album for adults, and he became deeply involved in a wide range of issues, including, notably, the successful campaign to curb waste by requiring CDs be shipped in small-sized packages, not in the so-called "long boxes." Last year, Raffi accompanied members of the Environmental Children's Organization to the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development—the "Earth Summit" at Rio De Janeiro. The simple directness of the speeches made by teenagers there convinced Raffi that the most effective venue for his own message lay with the very young audience he had long cultivated—an audience which was sorely missing him.

Though touring is arduous, Raffi loves to mention his excitement at the hero's welcome accorded by his fans. They're glad to have him back. But there is something else on Raffi's latest tour that has deeply moved him. "Throughout my concert tour, I've had letters from the parents of chronically ill children, terminally ill children, who have written me the most moving letters about how my music has helped them cope with illness, letters that bring tears to my eyes."

Raffi made arrangements so that many of these stricken children could meet him backstage during his tour. "You can imagine the feeling that's there!" he exclaims. Raffi adds that some of the most touching letters he received described the joyful response of children who are otherwise isolated within themselves, either because they're victims of cerebral palsy or because they've had to endure a dozen operations by age seven. "And the parents indicate that where you can't communicate with those children very well," Raffi says, "the music seems to have a way of getting right to their hearts.

COUNTRY'S FASTEST RISING STAR PERFORMS HER HITS—AND SONGS FROM HER NEW ALBUM—IN A WORLD PREMIERE DISNEY CHANNEL SPECIAL.

Trisha Year

SITTING ON TOP OF THE

In 1991, when Trisha Yearwood's first single, "She's In Love With The Boy" shot to Billboard's #1 country spot, it marked one of the strongest debuts of any artist in recent history—and it was the first single by a new female performer to reach the top of the country charts in decades. History was made when the song simultaneously topped Billboard, Radio & Records, and The Gavin Report.

"I guess it's a song that anyone of any age can relate to," Trisha Yearwood says modestly of her hit. "Families come with their children to my shows, and it just makes me feel so good to see their faces light up."

The world premiere of Trisha Yearwood: The Song Remembers When on The Disney Channel is one of the year's major events: it's both a rip-roarin' musical showcase and the first intimate look at the young star who has captured the hearts of millions in two short years. What's remarkable about the rise of Trisha Yearwood is that she combines the true-to-country roots essential for a traditional audience with the need to explore new territory, a combination which has drawn praise from all sorts of music lovers.

"The walls are coming down," Yearwood explains. "And it's great that artists aren't stereotyped anymore. What's appealing about country is that it's always been a very lyric-oriented, personal kind of music that tells a story. People experience the same things no matter where they live, and the music appeals to their basic emotions. Good music is good music."

And a lot of good music is what you get in this special filmed in a stylishly rustic cabaret setting at The Tennessee Performing Arts Center in Nashville. We join Trisha Yearwood in concert, and we also meet and talk with her at the historic Belle Meade Mansion. And at the show's very close, in a first-ever look by the public, Yearwood plays the guitar as she sings the old folk song "I Never Will Marry."

"I discovered that song on a Linda Ronstadt album when I was 14," Yearwood recalls. "I got a guitar at that time, and it was one of the first songs I learned how to play. Linda was one of my biggest influences."

Like the forthright Ronstadt, Trisha Yearwood embodies the qualities of the strong-willed and intelligent yet ever graceful woman of the Nineties. She was born and raised in the small town of Monticello, Georgia; her father was a banker for 25 years; her mother a school teacher. A straight-A student, Yearwood went on to earn a degree in business from Nashville's Belmont College before entering the music industry as an intern at a record company. She also sang hundreds of music demos for other artists—alongside another newcomer named Garth Brooks. When Brooks became a super-star with one of the biggest tours in history, he asked Yearwood to be the opening act.

"I've had success, but in a very short period of time," Yearwood confides. "I'm a relatively new artist to a lot of people, and I've performed in huge stadiums. I think this special is a nice way for people to get to know me and my music a little better."

By Mr. Bonzai

Yearwood

In addition to the smash "She's In Love With The Boy" from her platinum debut album, Yearwood also performs a touching new rendition of "The Woman Before Me," a passionate song she describes as "appealing because it's about a new relationship—but you can't just erase the past, you always carry some kind of baggage."

Also from her debut album, Yearwood performs the revved-up and free-wheelin' "That's What I Like About You." "This was actually a song written for a man," she reveals, "but I thought it would be great if a woman was talking about a man following her around like a shadow on the ground. It takes on a whole different attitude."

"Attitude" is a word that often comes up in reference to Trisha Yearwood. "Yes, I have been accused of 'attitude,'" she says. "But it's very hard to find up-tempo songs that really say anything. I look for songs that are a little bit sassy."

In 1992, with the release of her second album, Trisha was described by Entertainment Weekly as "one of the finest interpretive singers ever to grace [country music]." In this superb performance special we get powerful new versions of hits from the ▷ Hearts In Armor album.

"Wrong Side of Memphis," about a destiny-changing move to Nashville, is described by Yearwood as autobiographical, referring to the city that launched her spectacular career. She pulls no punches in the hard drivin' "You Say You Will," and sings of the loving loss in "Walkaway Joe." The muscular soul of "Down On My Knees" is an unashamed song of extreme emotion

"It is a desperate song about love," Yearwood admits, "but it doesn't mean you can stomp on my heart and treat me wrong. It says love is worth fighting for; you have to work hard to maintain a relationship."

In the album's title track, "Hearts In Armor," Trisha sings about the past that can never be mended: "Sometimes you let things slip away without saying how you feel –I think everybody has had that experience. My music is about life."

In the special, Trisha Yearwood also provides a sneak preview of tunes from her upcoming new album. Of the song "Mr. Radio" she says, "I think of old times, hot summers in the South. My mother told me about turning on the Grand Ole Opry, lying down on the cool floor and listening to the radio. It opened up a new world for people. It changed their lives, and this song is about the power of radio—and music."

"The Song Remembers When," which gives the special its name, is about how a great tune "can totally take you back to a special time in your life." The heart is further explored in "Love Has No Pride," and "Better Your Heart Than Mine" tells of loss once again, but with a new dash of *sass*parilla.

"One in a Row" is a 1962 Willie Nelson song given new life by Trisha Yearwood. "It's unlike anything I've ever done," she says.

Trisha Yearwood is a musical force to be reckoned with, and her band knows how to complement her powers. A bright star with a sense of purpose, she also welcomes the responsibilities of a role model for millions of women and young girls.

"My parents taught me you have to believe in yourself," Yearwood says. "You can be independent, you can be a businesswoman, you can be smart—and you can still be feminine."

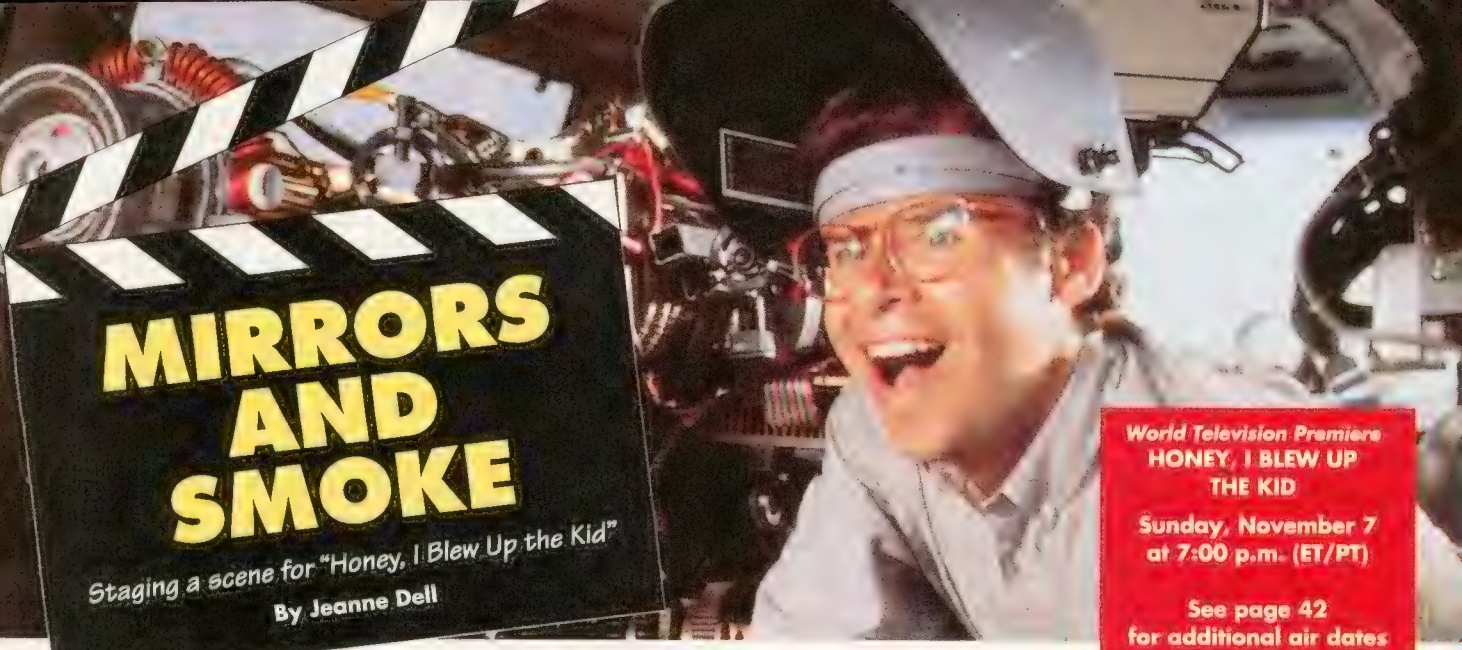
MIRRORS AND SMOKE

Staging a scene for "Honey, I Blew Up the Kid"

By Jeanne Dell



World Television Premiere
HONEY, I BLEW UP THE KID
Sunday, November 7 at 7:00 p.m. (ET/PT)

See page 42 for additional air dates

It's bad enough Wayne Szalinski has turned his two-year-old into a titan—he's even managed to turn the boy's stuffed "Big Bunny" into the world's largest plush toy. But what's Wayne to do when Adam Szalinski mistakes his baby sitter and his older brother for toys and scoops them into his overalls pocket while menacing Las Vegas, Nevada?

The answer is just one of the comic sequences from Honey, I Blew Up the Kid. On film, Rick Moranis as Wayne Szalinski mounts the head of Adam's giant-sized toy "Big Bunny," which is towed by helicopter to the 112-foot-tall boy. The wacky scientist tries to put Adam to sleep, using his fool proof Big Bunny voice. But like everything else the scientist attempts, the results are not as well—anticipated. And Szalinski finds himself leaping from Big Bunny's head into Adam's pocket to rescue elder son and baby sitter.

Of course, that's the way it looks on film. What you see is Hollywood's practiced sleight of hand. So how did they do it?

On a soundstage. In the film, the giant bunny head was attached by cables to a helicopter; on the soundstage, it was attached to a steel cross-bar. A single line suspended the propped head some 18 feet above the soundstage floor. For Szalinski's leap, Rick Moranis wore a flying harness and hip wires, jumping out into space and landing safely on the studio floor.

Enter Moranis's stunt double Hank Hooker, who performed the completed leap. Since the suspended bunny head lay at an angle from the prop construction of Adam Szalinski's chest, the head was set to swinging, just like a pendulum. Hooker squatted on top of the head, gauging the timing, balance, and momentum needed to execute the 12-foot leap.

At the right moment, Hooker launched himself into space and slammed into the prop chest. It was not a soft landing: the chest was wood overlaid with one inch of foam covered with fabric. On impact, Hooker swivelled and dropped feet first into Adam Szalinski's pocket. Stunt completed. "Sometimes," the stuntman shrugged, "it's necessary to do high work without a safety line."

The end result of all this preparation—a few minutes of film. But that's moviemaking. And on a movie like Honey, I Blew Up the Kid, it's a straightforward stunt. After all, we're talking about a film that boasts special post-production graphics, miniature sets, blue-screen technology, size 667 baby shoes, and a pint-sized reproduction of the Las Vegas strip. It's the art of smoke and mirrors: making viewers believe everything they're watching is real.

WE INVENTED A THERMOMETER THAT WORKS WITHIN THE ATTENTION SPAN OF THE AVERAGE FIVE-YEAR-OLD. (ONE SECOND.)

Finally, somebody's done something about the three-minute ordeal known as taking a temperature on a squirming kid. We've reduced it to one easy second. With the Thermoscan Instant Thermometer.

It takes a temperature at the ear (recognized as a very accurate way to take a temperature).

You just press a button. It's accurate. It's easy to read. You can even take a temperature while your child's asleep.

No more glass tubes to shake, no more worry about broken glass and virtually no fear of spreading germs.

It works in just a second. And it's designed to keep working–whenever your family needs it–for years.

Call us and we'll tell you where to get one. 1-800-EAR-TEMP, ext. 16.

The Nursery Rhyme Loved Around the World

Generations have treasured the memories of those magical words. The tale of Little Bo-Peep and her wandering sheep is, for many, the most beloved of all nursery rhymes. Now, this fabled shepherdess has stepped out of her storybook and is headed straight into your heart. The master sculptor of children, Patricia Rose, winner of the prestigious 1991 Dolls Award of Excellence, has captured Bo-Peep in fine bisque porcelain, exclusively for the Treasury Collection.™

The Beloved Storybook Lass Captured in Fine Bisque Porcelain

Bo-Peep is brought to life as never before by skilled dollmakers in fine bisque porcelain. Every detail of this porcelain "breather doll" is perfect, from her wide blue inset eyes, fringed with real lashes, to her handpainted lips, rosy cheeks and delicate fingertips. Her childlike quality is captured in her round cheeks, button nose and plump little arms.

Bo-Peep is simply enchanting in her puff-sleeved gown of candy cane pink stripes and a delicate floral print. Expanses of white lace trim her gathered apron. Her shoes and golden tresses are both tied up with white ribbons. And, of course, Bo-Peep carries her shepherdess' crook.

An Exceptional Collector's Opportunity

Bo-Peep is issued in a Premier Edition strictly limited to only 100 firing days. Each doll will bear the signature of Patricia Rose and be individually numbered and sent to you with the corresponding Certificate of Authenticity.

At this astounding issue price, Bo-Peep commands the attention of both the serious collector and the occasional doll buyer. Her craftsmanship, quality and fine detail compare to those of dolls costing much more, making her both a fine investment for today and a cherished heirloom for tomorrow. So, please act promptly before she vanishes o'er hill and dale.

Shown smaller than approximate size of 14." Bo-Peep comes complete with shepherdess' crook, numbered Certificate of Authenticity, display stand and exquisite collector's box.

Buy-Back Guarantee

Your purchase of Bo-Peep is fully protected by the Treasury Collection's™ Buy-Back Guarantee. We will gladly buy her back for full purchase price any time within 100 days—no conditions, no questions asked.

At 4½ she's reading 3rd grade books

a child prodigy? not at all! your child, too can be reading one, two or three years beyond present age level. . . even if a "poor" reader now

Prove it to yourself . . . with this 10 day free trial!

Reading is fun for Sarah—as it should be for every child. At age four-and-a-half, she's already choosing her own books at the San Diego, Cal. library.

She reads books many third graders find "hard going." Yet she won't enter first grade for another year.

Sarah is typical of thousands of children who learned to read with "Listen and Learn with Phonics"—a reading kit that actually makes reading fun.

"Listen and Learn with Phonics" was developed by a reading expert. It has been endorsed, after extensive testing, by teachers, schools, and educators.

This practical (and inexpensive) home-learning kit fascinates eager young minds from three to ten. The child hears the letters or sounds on a cassette, sees them in a book and then repeats them. This makes an absorbing game of better reading — with amazing results.

For example: Slow or average readers show sudden—often spectacular—improvement in reading and spelling. Older children often advance their reading skills several years beyond their age level. Young "pre-schoolers" actually teach themselves to read by this simple but startlingly effective method.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

I am tremendously pleased. My 5-year old is reading very well and I plan to begin with my 4-year old. I am so glad I invested in this set. Judy I. Gay, Stow, Oh.

Last year I taught grades 1-4. I had a 6-year old boy who came to 1st grade reading 6th-grade words. His father had taught him at home using your set. The father donated the set to our school. I was thrilled because some of the children need a lot of extra help with reading and phonics. Janet Griffin, Triangle School, Apex, N.C.

What a happy Grandma I am! Since I ordered a Phonics set and had it mailed to my granddaughter, Kim, and her 6-year old sister, they are both making A's in school. Mrs. Clarence Sparks, Clearwater, Fl.

Four years ago, I ordered your Phonics set for my 2 children; then, ages 4 and 5. They are now top readers and spellers in their class. Mrs. Nancy Cook, Santa Paula, Ca.

Your company has the best teaching method I have found. Thank you for offering such quality educational materials. Mrs. Joseph Vandenbush, Green Bay, Wisc.

SPECIAL PARENTS' GUIDE

A 32-page Parents' Guide is included. However, you don't need special teaching skills to use this program. Nor do you need any special knowledge of phonics.

In fact, your child needs no special supervision on your part. This set is so simple, so fascinating, children can learn "on their own" without help.
